Charleston, SC- Crescent Homes announces a highly successful launch to their philanthropy program, GIVE, and presents five new nonprofits to receive donations in the third quarter. The private homebuilder contributes $250 for every Charleston home sale, drawing awareness to the groups and allowing customers to select where to donate.

Since launching GIVE in April 2017 in the second quarter, Crescent Homes has donated a total of $21,750 to local Charleston nonprofits:

- $5,750 to Camp Happy Days
- $5,000 to the Charleston Animal Society
- $3,250 to Habitat for Humanity
- $3,500 to Be A Mentor
- $4,250 to the Ronald McDonald House

“Seeing this vision come to life in the form of tangible, monetary donations to worthy causes fuels us to push further and work harder. We are honored to be in a position to contribute to these incredible foundations.”

-Ted Terry, Owner & CEO

The GIVE program's third quarter recipients are:

Teachers' Supply Closet

The local group benefits Charleston children in need by providing a free resource for their teachers to find school supplies. The group aims to lay a solid foundation for the education of the tri-area's students.

The Dee Norton Child Advocacy Center

Working hard to prevent, halt and offer healing after child abuse of local Charleston children, the foundation offers solace and support for families where abuse may be present, as well as training programs to improve the community response to abuse.

The Green Heart Project

Green Heart volunteers work with students to instill valuable lesson while creating and maintaining urban farms, utilizing school gardens to educate and connect.

Palmetto Warrior Connection

This non-profit works closely with veterans to provide assistance at every level of transition, from housing and education to employment and mental health.

Lowcountry Food Bank

Fighting hunger in the lowcountry through many various programs, the group performs services such as breakfast for school children in need, distributing boxes of food to local seniors and empowering individuals to make healthy choices through nutrition education.

"My vision for Crescent Homes is to build quality homes and neighborhoods that have a positive impact on the community. With GIVE, we are trying to broaden our reach by giving back to the community which supports us"

-Ted Terry, Owner & CEO

Part of the Crescent Homes commitment to always going beyond the standard, the GIVE program extends that mission beyond home building to spread awareness, a sense of community and goodwill throughout Charleston.
